And a lot of different pandiculations to release tightness he had. The difference in tightness is best visible in palms and finger position of both arms.

Walking almost normal and tall, shakes only when really nervous, positive, happy and full of plans. We are now practicing skill movements to integrate and use new movement ranges he learned in sessions. Feeling of release and softness in front of the body is now permanent and strong, movement is more relaxed but he's not use of that so he's system has to learn to move in new ways.
